AMNESTY INTERNATIONAL

Native American activist Leonard Peltier has been imprisoned for more than four decades after an unfair legal process and trial. He has remained behind bars despite concerns about political bias and injustice that have clouded his case. Now the 71 year-old's health is failing, he has exhausted all appeals, and he is not up for parole until 2024. If the President doesn't act, he is likely to die in prison.

When Leonard was arrested, he was a leading member of the American Indian Movement or AIM—a political and cultural movement campaigning for the rights of Native Americans in the United States. In 1975, two FBI agents were killed during a confrontation between law enforcement and AIM members on Pine Ridge reservation. Leonard was eventually convicted of their murders, although it later came to light that the FBI coerced eyewitnesses and withheld evidence.

Today, Leonard is imprisoned in Florida, surrounded by concrete and steel far from his family and community.

Ask President Obama to grant Leonard Peltier clemency – before it is too late.
